

Les Wilson

Les has over 20 years' experience working with Self-Governing Yukon First Nations in critical and action orientated roles. Most recently he has held progressive positions as an Economic Development Advisor for Kwanlin Dun First Nation and a Senior Project Manager leading business development for the Chu Niiikwan Development Corporation. These roles have allowed Les to see firsthand how governments and the private sector can drive economic development and positive results for Yukon First Nations. Les sees the value in a positive approach to business and government that fosters cooperation, collaborative relationships, and is focussed on building up local resources and capacity. He is always committed to ensuring the journey and the end result will move the future Yukon generations toward prosperity. Les was born and raised in Whitehorse Yukon and calls it home with his wife and two kids. He loves to spend time with his family, woodworking and cooking. Les studied science and engineering technology in Alberta.
